Honggong, January 24th, 1878.

WE subjoin from the Overland Trade Report. as being of local interest, a reply to an article of a very specious character, which appeared in the Manchester Guardian with reference to the great milder question, which is at last attracting the serious attention of the manufacturers at home. It' would be tedious to reiterate all the specious arguments which chers, H. O. Erdmann, A. E. Vancher, H. were advanced at the Manchester Chamber Cohen, C. P. Chater, and E. Baker, of Commerce, in defence of the system which has worked so much injury in the piece goods meeting, and the following Report of the Ditrade, and has gone so far towards lessening the prestige of foreign manufactures. Those of our readers who are interested in of Assets and Liabilities, and extract of Profit question will at once appreciate the point to which the discussion has now been driven, as manifested in the article in the Guardian. It being no longer possible to deny that the so-called "sizing" tends to induce mildew. the manufacturers and their apologists now Directors' and Auditors' free, and all charges endeavour to make out that the buyers ofthe goods know of this risk, and knowing of gratulating the shareholders on the improved it, virtually accept it. The truth, however, of $3 Three Dollars per suare, which, if agreed as, that all the buyers can know of accurately, is that there is a certain amount of weighting in the piece. In order, however, to fix or set $2,000 to Depreciation Fund, and to carry ing a reward of the $83 to any person the plaster of Paris which is used for the weighting, the manufacturers introduce certain chemical salts, and it is these which tend to produce meisture, which is the chief cause of the mildew. That a manufacturer, who resorts to experiments of this character must do so at his own risk, appears to us too obvious a proposition to need enforcing, but by ingeniously talking of this as more or less sizing, instead of-as it is in its relation to the goods-more or less poisoning, a plausible case is made out, and the fraudulent system upheld under a variety of very cussion in the Manchester Chamber, which is too long to reproduce at length; can be pended to the article in the Guardian. We certainly fully agree with Mr. Spence, that the best thing the Manchester people can do. is to return to the manufacture of cloth.

The discussion of the mildew question in the Manchester Chamber of Commerce the report of which has recently come to hand, has attracted fresh attention to the subject. The Manchester Guardian sums up with tolerable accuracy the arguments which may be advanced in defence of the practices among the manufacturers, but und are recommended by the Board according. wharf, and as he came out of the pantry, be saw Coventry, its review of the subject contains many obvious fallucies which it is desirable briefly to reply to. There is a calmly philosophical style about the writing, which is really very refreshing, if it does not offer any great consolation to the meris to be pitied; the consumer will learn by prospects very good. It was expected that claimed the purse and contents as his; he gave said Jones, "that is what I mean."

This is a very comfortable way of look. he hoped to see considerably reduced. At the to him and told him that he would have to give last meeting he had stated that they it up, when he made answer that he would somer ing at the matter, for all but the merchant and the "ultimate consumer," but it may be pro expected to get money on better terms, and it throw the whole overboard, or burn it, than give was gratifying to be able to report that they it up, ashe was not compelled to give it up. Mr. Mendel has done a much needed hervice to the trade by calling public attention to the prevalence of mildew, and it must be acknowledged that he has hit the chief sources of the evil. The improper stowage and ventilation of goods on board ship and the use of hooks in transferring bales are very likely sources of mildew. But the root of the mischief is undoubtedly traceable, first to over-sizing and of Missouri provides that only male citizens secondly to dampness. The inquiry, who is to are entitled to vote. No doubt the evile complained of are humilisting and painful to all who desire that the reputation of British industry and British commerce should be unetuined. It may be comforting to such persons to know that the evils tend to care themselves, and are indeed now doing so, as similar evils have done before. This consolation may not be the best that could be wished for, but it is at least the only one discoverable at present.

The following are the remarks made by Mr. Spence and Mr. Farguson in the course of the discussion of the subject in the Manchester Chamber :---

Mr. P. Spence said that he was entirely disinterested in this question so far as it regarded Union Insurance Society of Cauton, new shares manufacturers, and was only interested in it so far as the character of the district and their staple trade was concerned. He was surprised at some of the statements be had beard from China and Japan Marine Insurance-Tis. 25 Mr. Mendel and Mr. Slugg as to the perfect moral rectitude of "filling" goods with something which was altogether different from their character. They professed to made tissues. China clay was not tissue. Chloride of magnesia and all those other substances which they China Fire Insurance Company's Shares-$36 put in simply for the purpose of giving an appearance, had none of the character of tissues. There must therefore be deception practised upon somebody—not upon the manufacturer. who knew what he was doing, and not upon the merchant, who knew what he was doing too; but when it came to the person who wished to get tissue and nothing else-an article which would wear as well as it looked -he calculated that a stout body had more wear in it, and he therefore preferred it, although he really got something thinner with something in it to make it heavy. Now it was well known to all manufacturers and merchants that that could be legitimately done by starch properly so called. Therefore, all that was put in beyond that, was simply to add weight to the body, and at an expense which was utterly wasted so far as the wearer was concerned, and to make the article look better. than it really was. With regard to the causes of mildew in their goods, there were three classes of salts or substances in these bodies-Chins clay, which was not a ealt at all, but which physically or mechanically had a great tendency to absorb moisture; and Mr. Slagg was wrong in saying that Obina clay could not produce mildew. China clay would answer perfectly well for doing it. Then there were some salts which were efflorescent—sulphate of sodium, and other thinge, which it would not do to use. If that class of salts were used he should consider that mildew would be of frequent occur- Japan White Waz, 100-boxes, at $16.00, by rence indeed, He thought the best thing they could do was to return to the making of cloth. ANECDOTES OF WORDSWORTH. If you sat down and entered into carnest conversation with him, Mrs. Wordsworth would come very quickly and seat herself on the other side of him. That vein is unquestionably the richest farcical drollery. His description of his leave-taking, while "the dog al this while sheds not a tear," and of the dog's misbehaviour when he thrust "himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs," are perfectly irresistible. We must leave thee, Launce; but we leave thee with less regret, for thou hast worthy successors. Thou wert among the first-fruits, we think, of the creations of the greatest comic genius that the world has seen, and thou wilt endure for ever, with Bottom, and Malvolio, and Parolles, and Dogberry. Thou wert conceived, perhaps, under that humble roof at Stratford, to gaze upon which all nations have since sent forth their pilgrims!
